2. [redacted] in the farming districts outside Berlin, orchard owners had to deliver 60% of their fruit crop to the government at a price of RM 0.45 a pound. [redacted] milk delivery quotas have been increased, but [redacted] the farmers receive no butter in return and therefore hold back a considerable part of their milk to process into butter themselves.
3. [redacted] the Department of Food and Agriculture in the State of Saxony has drawn up plans to issue ration cards to farmers, who have been classed as self-providers thus far. Under these plans it is alleged that farmers would have to deliver their entire production to the State; they would have to get their seed from the Russians and their production quota would be based on the amount of seed, farm area, and quality of soil. Their ration cards would be issued in accordance with the extent to which they fulfill their production quotas.
